LENT & EASTER This time last year we saw our churches closing as the country went into a complete lockdown at the start of the pandemic. This year we will again be in lockdown but at least our church has been open for many months, even if at limited capacity, for this, we must be grateful to all those who have volunteered to help with the stewarding. So as Lent progresses towards Easter we are doing things a little differently this year. We will celebrate GOOD FRIDAY 9.30am with the reading of the Passion and Holy Communion and celebrate HOLY MASS ON EASTER SUNDAY 9.30AM.

(Both occasions are book online only)

As we are just two weeks into Lent we have still plenty of time to observe Lent as a time of interior renewal: Don't give up or take on more than you can manage; pray the Rosary often; have a tender devotion to St Joseph in this his special Year; do some Lenten spiritual reading, especially the Gospels; pray for others as the ultimate act of charity; remember that fasting is about God and not about ourselves. As Easter draws closer I hope this spiritual hunger for Jesus will increase within all of us.

REMEMBERING WITH HOPE - online service Tuesday 23 March at 7-00pm.

On the anniversary of the first lockdown, join with us to commemorate loved ones that have died during this past year and remember them with Hope. We feel it is important to mark the date of the start of the first lockdown with a reflective service giving space to remember those we know who have passed away over the last year (whatever the reason); so a team of us at Elizabeth Prout Bereavement Care (The Briery) and Growing Old Gracefully have joined together to hold this online service.

FIELD NOTES In the Gospel of St John, the cleansing of the temple takes place at the beginning of Jesus' ministry and not at the beginning of the events of the last days of Jesus' life. The startling words and actions of Jesus in the temple, whether they are from the Synoptic accounts or John's account, took on new meaning for later generations of Christians. "Take these things out of here! Stop making my Father's house a marketplace!" The temple was not a commercial centre but rather a holy place of the Father. Like the prophets before him, Jesus tried to awaken the hearts of his people.

Jesus' disciples recall him saying in the temple the words of Psalm 68:10: "Zeal for your house will consume me." I understand this verse to mean: "I am filled with a burning love for your house." When the magnificent Temple of Jerusalem had been destroyed by the Romans, and both Jews and Christians grieved at its loss, the followers of Jesus recalled this incident in the temple. Now they could see new meaning in it; it was a sign that the old temple was finished but a new temple was to be built. This new temple would not be of stone, wood and gold. It would be a living temple of holy people (1 Peter 2:4-6; Ephesians 2:19-22).

The history of Monte Cassino can help us reflect on the gospel. It had been founded by St Benedict in the sixth century. Before the end of the century, it had been destroyed. A second abbey reached its golden age under the great abbot Desiderius (Blessed Pope Victor III), who from 1058 completely rebuilt it and extended its library and estates, and gave his encouragement to liturgy, literature and the arts. So there was a deep sense of shock when the Allies bombed it in 1944, there remains the sense of civilisation being robbed of one of its great achievements.

When the war ended, great efforts were made to restore the venerable building, piece by piece, and in 1964, 20 years after the blitz, Pope Paul VI reconsecrated it. It is simply astonishing that such incredible efforts were made. A most noble ambition: peace, reconstruction, forgiveness and generosity. The abbey speaks most eloquently.

The gospel today speaks eloquently not of a noble ambition but of the reality that in the person of Jesus there is peace, reconstruction, forgiveness and generosity. As we contemplate Jesus' burning love for the things of his Father, and the saving mystery of his cross, let us pray these words:

Speak Lord your servant is listening.
